

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

Better service is provided to repeater (regular) customers by linking predetermined image information with the customer information to thereby control the customer information, and outputting the information on a display of a mobile image communication terminal such as high function and high performance mobile phone
5 or/and a display or a printer of a personal computer. A customer information control system comprising: one or a plurality of cameras for taking photographs of a face or/and the whole image or/and the frame of customers, a system for encoding the image information of these cameras and transmitting the encoded information to an image
10 server via a wired or/and wireless network line; a system for transmitting the image information of the face or the whole image of the customers to customer lists (charts) via the wired or/and wireless network line; customer information collection means for collecting customer information through questionnaires for being input or voice input; a system for encoding the customer information and transmitting the encoded
15 information to a data server via the wired or/and wireless network line; a system for transmitting the customer information to the customer list (chart) via the wired or/and wireless network line; and a customer list (chart) in which the image information and the customer information transmitted from the data server and the image server via the wired or/and wireless network line can be related to each other and automatically 20 listed as the identical information.